CONSTRUCTED RESPONSE QUESTIONS

---

QUESTION:

Students of a medical college were protesting against the University for Low Pass Percentage in the first professional examination. The student leader stated that this college had a pass percentage of 23.7% compared to another medical college examined by the same University, which had 84% pass percentage. The students were very angry and wanted the matter to be investigated.

1. Define the problem in this scenario. (2 marks)
2. What possible reasons could have caused this problem? (5 marks)
3. What possible solution(s) can be offered to overcome this problem? (5 marks)
4. What in your opinion is the most suitable solution? Justify the selected solution. (3 marks)

KEY:

1. The students of one medical college are upset because the pass percentage is very low.
2.
  - a. There could have been some error in calculation of results.
  - b. The examiners may be biased against this college/for the other college.
  - c. The examination paper may have been made by teachers of the other college.
  - d. The teaching and assessment in this college may have been effected in some way leading to ineffective learning by the students.
  - e. The course may not have been covered.
3.
  - a. Form a review committee to probe into the cause of the problem.
  - b. Have the results re-checked.
  - c. Have the papers rechecked by different examiners.
  - d. Review the examination paper administered.
  - e. Review the teaching and assessment of that medical college.
4. Since we do not know the cause of the problem, the most suitable solution is to form a review committee to probe into the cause of the problem.
